Dear Granger:-

Your letter of June 13th, 1917, addressed to Mr. Sellers, relative to transferring your membership from the Philadelphia Chapter to the Chicago Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, has been handed me for action in accordance with the provisions of the By-Laws of the Institute. I therefore hereby state that you are under no financial obligation to the Philadelphia Chapter and that you are in good standing. This letter should be forwarded to the Secretary of the Institute for his records with a request for transfer of assignment and he will record same and notify the Secretaries of both Chapters of the action taken.

Yours truly,

Dear Mr. Hibball:-

Responding to yours of October 24th I referred the request of the War Department for Granger's record to Mr. Parker because he is the keeper of the records of the Institute. He made reply that the War Department was to be given complete access. This was done. All he found was a Judiciary report exonerating Mr. Granger's firm of any wrong doing, so the matter is closed.

Dear Mr. Kemper:

In reading over the current number of the Octagon I was interested in the proposal for the Institute to issue cards of introduction for members of the Institute traveling abroad.

Mrs. Granger and I are sailing early in October with the intention of spending a year in Europe and if the Institute is issuing cards, I would like one to the R. I. B. A. and to the similar organization in France, Germany and Austria, if they have them.

Such cards ought to be extremely useful and I would certainly appreciate getting them if they are in shape to be issued.

Yours of the 20th is at hand.

We have been trying to devise a card of introduction which would really mean something when issued to Institute members. It should be easy to do this, but it is not.

The first attempt, as approved by Mr. Baldwin, is now being made up, and we will send you a card not later than the middle of September.

MAJOR GRANGER, 72, A NOTED ARCHITECT

Designer of Leading Edifices in Chicago and Midwest Dies
in Roxbury, Conn., Home

ENGINEER OFFICER IN WAR

He Laid Out Euclid Heights in Cleveland—A Great-Nephew of Gen. William Sherman

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROXBURY, Conn., Dec. 3—Major Alfred Hoyt Granger, retired architect, died at his home, Few Acres, here early today of a heart attack. He was 72 years old.

Born in Zanesville, Ohio, Major Granger was the son of Judge Moses Moorhead Granger and Mary Hoyt Reese Granger. The Granger family, headed by Lancelot Granger, were early settlers in this country, the family having come to Newburyport, Mass., from Cumberland, England, in 1640.

A great nephew of General William T. Sherman and of John Sherman, Secretary of State in the Cabinet of William McKinley, Major Granger spent much time as a youth in their company and that of Henry Adams, the historian. He thus was part of the group known as "The Souls."

Major Granger received his A. B. degree from Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio, in 1887, and then studied architecture at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, from which he was graduated in 1889. He pursued his studies at the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris, returning to the United States in 1891.

Began Career as Draftsman

He spent several years as a draftsman in the offices of Shepley, Rutan & Coolidge of Boston and Chicago, and helped in the preparation of the plans for the Chicago Art Institute, the Columbia Exposition at Chicago and the Chicago Public Library.

On Feb. 1, 1893, he went into practice for himself in Cleveland, founding the firm of Granger & Meade, and planned the laying out of Euclid Heights. In January, 1898, he formed a partnership in Chicago with Charles S. Frost. During this period he designed the La Salle Street station, the Chicago & Northwestern Railway terminal, the Northern Trust Bank Building, St. Luke's Hospital, the Home for Incurables and the James C. King Home for Aged Men, all in Chicago.

He also designed the Union Station in Omaha and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway station in Minneapolis.

During the World War, he served as a captain of engineers, as chairman of the Committee of Emergency Construction for the War Industries Board and as commanding officer of Company C, Seventy-eighth Engineers, at Camp Humphrey, Va. He was honorably discharged with the rank of major.

He resumed his practice in Chicago in 1919, forming the firm of Granger and Bollenbacher. Other projects he designed included the hospital building for the Soldiers Home at Washington, D. C., the union and administration buildings at the University of Indiana, the medical and dental buildings at the University of Illinois, Pierce Hall at Kenyon College, the Winnebago County Court House at Oshkosh, Wis., and the new Chicago Club.

He Retired Three Years Ago

Major Granger, who retired in 1936, was a Fellow of the American Institute of Architects and a former president of the institute's Chicago chapter, and a member of the Illinois Institute of Architects and the American Association of Engineers.

He was founder and for six years president of the Architects of Chicago. His clubs included the Caxton and Chicago, the Cosmos of Washington, D. C., and the Century of New York. He had lectured on architecture at Yale and the University of Illinois.

Major Granger was the author of "Life of Charles Follen McKim," "England's World Empire," "Chicago Welcomes You" and "Spirit of Vienna."

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Belle Hughitt Granger, daughter of the late Marvin H. Hughitt, a pioneer railroad executive of the Northwest, and three daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth G. Brown of New York, Mrs. Chester D. Shepard of Menasha, Wis., and Mrs. Arthur Krock of Washington, D. C.

ALFRED HOYT GRANGER, architect, 72, in Roxbury, Conn. Major Granger was born in Zanesville, Ohio, received his A.B. degree from Kenyon College, then studied architecture at Massachusetts Tech from which he was graduated in 1889, continuing his studies at the Ecole in Paris. He spent several years as a draftsman in the offices of Shepley, Rutan & Coolidge of Boston and Chicago, and of Jenney & Mundie, Chicago. In 1893 he established the firm of Granger & Meade in Cleveland. In 1898 he formed a partnership in Chicago with Charles S. Frost, which firm was particularly active in the design of railroad stations. During the World War he served as a captain of engineers, being honorably discharged with the rank of major. Resuming his practice in Chicago, he established the firm of Granger & Bollenbacher. Major Granger retired in 1936. He was a Fellow of the American Institute of Architects, a former president of the Chicago Chapter, a founder and for six years president of the Architects of Chicago club. He was author of "Charles Follen McKim," "England's World Empire," and "Spirit of Vienna, 1936."
