

Proceedings of the Forty-ninth Annual Convention of the American Institute of Architects

*Held in the Hemicycle of the Corcoran Gallery of Art
Washington, D. C.
December 1, 2 and 3, 1915*

Published by the Board of Directors
American Institute of Architects appointed a City-Plan Commission, at the head of which the Mayor placed Mr. Homer.

For these services to the Institute, to the public and to the art, as well as the profession of architecture, I nominate Mr. Homer to the honor of Fellowship in the American Institute of Architects.

THE PRESIDENT: Guy Lowell is nominated for advancement to Fellowship, and his name will be presented by Mr. J. Randolph Coolidge, Jr.

MR. COOLIDGE: It is an honor and a pleasure to be invited to present to you a worthy candidate for election to Fellowship in the Institute.

Guy Lowell was born in Boston about forty-five years ago, graduated from Harvard in 1892, and in architecture at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology some two years later. He went to Paris, entered the Ecole des Beaux-Arts and won the diploma of the French Government after little more than three years of study there.

He completed his professional education by a course in landscape design under M. Edouard André. Upon his return to America some fifteen years ago, he opened an office in Boston, and shortly afterward one in New York, and has conducted his professional work in both cities up to this time with conspicuous success.

Among the more widely known of his buildings are the Lecture Hall and Emerson Hall built for Harvard College, two dormitories and a refectory for Simmons College, Boston; seven buildings for Phillips Academy, Andover, Massachusetts; the Normal School at Framingham, Massachusetts; the New Hampshire Historical Society building at Concord, the Boscawen Library, a few miles north of Concord, one of the smallest and most exquisite buildings of its class; the Cumberland County Court-House in Portland, Maine; the first building and recent enlargement of the new Museum of Fine Arts, Boston; the gate-houses and park buildings for the Charles River Embankment; the New York County Court-House, a ten-million dollar edifice, won in competition against worthy peers.

In landscape work, he laid out the grounds for Radcliffe College, Cambridge, Massachusetts; for the Andrew Carnegie estate on Fifth Avenue, New York; for the late J. P. Morgan on Madison Avenue, and for a long list of estates on Long Island, Sag Harbor, Locust Valley, Manhasset, Westbury, Oyster Bay, Jericho,—on the north shore of Massachusetts Bay, and elsewhere in which the houses, stables, and landscape work were entirely from his designs.

His clients have been discriminating, exacting, and wealthy, and his extraordinary success proves that he has met their requirements, practical, esthetic, and financial. In building the Art Museum under somewhat unusual conditions of site and soil, the extras, merely nominal, were incurred by the clients and not by their architect. His business methods are admirable, his enthusiasm for his work and for his profession unbounded, and his accomplishment commands the respect and admiration both of the critical and of the uncritical. One of the most highly trained architects in this country, he is sound in taste, rational in design, and progressive. Few men in the profession have more completely measured up to the fullness of great opportunities.

THE PRESIDENT: Frank B. Meade is nominated for advancement to Fellowship and is to be presented by Mr. Abram Garfield.

MR. GARFIELD: I have the great personal pleasure of presenting Mr. Frank B. Meade's name for Fellowship in this organization. He and I were partners for a number of years, and have always been friends.

Mr. Meade is not one of the older men of Cleveland, but in spite of that there have probably been more architects, who are now practising in Cleveland, who have drifted through his office than through any other office in the town. There are architects and there are associates, probationers, members of the Institute, and Fellows—and they all look back on the training they had with him, because it was not precisely under him. Mr. Meade always worked directly with those who were in his office, showed them just what to do, and we learned a good many things which we have not since forgotten.

His architectural achievements are, of course, pronounced, but it is the things that he does and that any of us do outside of the regular run of our work which puts us in a proper position for advancement to Fellowship. The man who has activities related to architecture is the man who I believe is doing the profession the most good, and Mr. Meade, as many of you know, has worked with Mr. Brunner and Mr. Olmstead for the past several years, on the Commission of Cleveland, and has had very much to do with the furthering of good work.

Besides this, he is an admirable leader of an orchestra. That is not an architectural achievement, but it is allied. He is a good fiddler. Some architects paint, and do a certain amount of sculpture, but to be a fiddler and to be able to lead an orchestra are achievements worthy of consideration, and I am always glad whenever any of our members do those things and do them well. The Hermit Club of Cleveland, an organization which gives plays, writes plays, and paints its own scenery and writes music, could hardly exist unless Frank B. Meade were its president, and he always has been. They never elect anybody else to the office at all.

I take very great pleasure in presenting his name to you for your consideration.

THE PRESIDENT: George S. Mills is nominated for advancement to Fellowship, and his name is to be presented by Mr. Brunner.

MR. BRUNNER: It gives me sincere pleasure to present the name of George S. Mills for advancement to Fellowship in the American Institute of Architects. Mr. Mills was born in London, December 5, 1866, and came to America in 1870. He was educated in St. Louis, and he began his architectural career in that city in the office of George Barnett.

Mr. Mills is now the leading architect in Toledo, Ohio, where he has practised for many years.

Among the many buildings that he has designed may be mentioned the following: The Ohio Building; the Toledo Club; the Congregational Church; the Secor Hotel; some of the Buildings of the Ohio State University in Columbus, and he has collaborated with me in designing the Municipal Building in Toledo.

Mr. Mills was active in organizing the Toledo Chapter, of which he is Secretary. In my association with him, and I have known him for several years, I have always found him to be a man of the highest integrity, who believed that architecture was not a business but a profession. I feel that Mr. Mills especially deserves the honor of being a Fellow of this body because before the Toledo Chapter was created he anticipated our ideals and did his utmost to raise the standard of architecture in his community. He is not only an excellent architect, he is also a good citizen and deeply interested in his city, in his state, and in his country.

THE PRESIDENT: Charles H. Prindeville is nominated for advancement to Fellowship, and his name will be presented by Mr. Irving K. Pond.

MR. POND: If I could extract the choicest of the felicities and sincere expressions which have come forth in these previous presentations, and clothe them in the poetic diction of the President, you would have the speech that I would like to make in nomination of Charles H. Prindeville, of the Illinois Chapter.

His poise and judicial attitude, as manifested in his Chapter activities, in the committee work of the Institute, on the floor of the Convention, in the arduous duty of the Committee on Practice for a term of years, are carried over into the execution and the design of his work. With Mr. James J. Egan, his partner, now deceased, he designed the Cathedral at Pittsburgh.

For himself, he is carrying on such work as the Mercy Hospital in Chicago.

But buildings are mere trifles. The practice that the man has developed in the stress of Institute and professional activities, is what we are recognizing in presenting him for Fellowship to the American Institute of Architects. I take great honor and pleasure in presenting his name.

THE PRESIDENT: Frederick A. Russell is nominated for advancement to Fellowship and is to be presented by Mr. Edward Stotz.

MR. STOTZ: I have the honor and pleasure of presenting the name of Frederick A. Russell, President of the Pittsburgh Chapter, for advancement to Fellowship in the Institute.

Mr. Russell was peculiarly fortunate in receiving his first impressions and training in the office of the late H. H. Richardson, entering his office in 1883 and remaining until Richardson's death three years later.

Ten years of service with Longfellow, Aiden & Harlow followed; after which the firm of Rutan & Russell was established, and is still continued by Mr. Russell, Frank E. Rutan's untimely death occurring about ten years ago.

Mr. Russell's work has covered a wide and varied field, from country estate to municipal and commercial buildings of magnitude. Throughout, his work has been conceived according to the best architectural traditions and characterized by evidences of careful study in detail and dignity in composition.

His activities in his Chapter and State Association have inspired others to serve more faithfully, and he has most acceptably filled all the offices, as well as served on committees that have labored for the public good; notably the Municipal Improvement Committee, to which influence must largely be attributed the development of an Educational Center, already a reality and still growing, known as the Oakland District. One of the first buildings in this district, the Schenley Hotel, was the work of Rutan & Russell.

Perhaps the truest and best cause we may have to so honor a man lies fundamentally behind his actual expressed work, namely his personal character, his ideals, and the spirit of emulation which he evokes in others, and on this score those who should know best believe that Frederick A. Russell has inspired and directly aided others to forward the cause for which this Institute stands.

THE PRESIDENT: William H. Schuchardt is nominated for advancement to Fellowship and his name will be presented by Mr. Alexander C. Eschweiler.

MR. ESCHWEILER: I deem it a privilege and a pleasure to present to this Convention the name of a close personal friend for advancement to Fellowship in the American Institute of Architects.

William Herbert Schuchardt was born in Milwaukee, in 1874. In his earliest years, when still in the grammar school, he had determined on the choice of his profession, and directed all his efforts along architectural lines so that, before entering the University, he was already proficient in free-hand drawing and the elementary sciences.

At the age of seventeen he became a student at the University of Wisconsin, completed there his sophomore year and gained during his college vacations his first office experience. He entered the

Third Day—Morning Session

The Convention met at 9.30 o'clock A.M., President Sturgis presiding.

Mr. Trowbridge, for the tellers, reported the result of the election, as follows:

Total number of ballots cast	129
Majority vote is	65

Officers.—

Kimball	58
Mauran	71
La Farge	129
Medary	124
Fenner	128
Waid	128

Directors.—

Brockway	69
Brown	99
Faville	70
Lubschez	70
Sellers	74

All the Fellows were elected—no one receiving less than 119 votes, and only one negative vote being cast.

THE PRESIDENT: I declare Mr. John Lawrence Mauran elected President of the Institute. Mr. C. Grant La Farge has been elected First Vice-President of the Institute. Mr. Milton B. Medary has been elected Second Vice-President. Mr. Burt L. Fenner has been elected Secretary. Mr. D. Everett Waid has been elected Treasurer. Mr. Edwin H. Brown and Mr. Horace Wells Sellers have been elected Directors for the term of three years.

As has been announced, two gentlemen have made an absolutely even break for the third place. Your President, at all events, has never been faced with this particular situation before, and I shall be very glad to be guided by the sentiment of those present as to what is the proper course under the circumstance. It would seem as if it would be necessary to take another ballot.

It was so voted.

The President requested the Secretary to prepare the ballots, and then announced the order of business for the session to be as follows:

Presentation of Certificates to Fellows.

Report of the Committee on Town Planning.

Report of the Committee to consider the same.

Report of the Committee on Chapters: Matters in the proposed Constitution and By-Laws requiring the attention of the Convention.

Report of the Committee to consider the same.

Matters in the report of the Board, not yet covered:

Expenses of delegates.

Advertising.

Code of ethics.

New Business.

The next Convention.

Obituary notices.

Resolutions.

Notices.

The delinquent list.

Under this order, the first matter was the presentation of the certificates to the newly elected Fellows.

The President read the list of newly elected Fellows of the Institute, and the following gentlemen appeared and received certificates: Mr. George F. A. Brueggeman, Professor Warren P. Laird, Mr. Charles H. Prindeville, Mr. Frederick A. Russell.

THE PRESIDENT: We will now take up the unfinished business, the first of which is the report of the Committee on Town Planning. Mr. Ford does not appear to be present, and I will ask Mr. Crane to present the report of the Committee on Reports of Special Committees. (See Appendix 18a.)

Mr. Crane read the report of his Committee, which was then adopted.

THE PRESIDENT: The next matter is the report of the Committee on Chapters, by Mr. Kohn. Mr. Kohn is temporarily absent from the room, so perhaps, as the Convention is fairly familiar with Mr. Kohn's report, we might very well call on Mr. Crane for his report on the report of the Committee on Chapters. (See Appendix 7a.)

Mr. Crane read the report of his Committee, and it was then adopted.

MR. KOHN: The President very properly reproved the Chairman of the Committee on Chapters yesterday for not following the usual procedure when presenting his report the day before. I will, therefore, now present the report of the Committee on Chapters, and bring it up to date.

The first report of the Committee was in the form of a preliminary draft of the Constitution and By-Laws, sent out to all the members on August 25. A supplementary report of the Committee was sent out from the Octagon at the end of the month of October. The Committee further presented a new and somewhat modified form of Constitution and By-Laws the day of the opening of this Convention, and this document, with a few words that I shall add now, will constitute the report of the Committee on Chapters.

The final draft of the Constitution and By-Laws was presented on the first day of this Convention and there was a lengthy consideration at that session on at least one point in connection with that draft. At the end of that discussion, it was decided