Dear Mr. Kalionzes:

The Secretary is happy to inform you that your application for membership in The Institute was acted on favorably by The Board of Directors and that you were admitted to corporate membership in The Institute and assigned to membership in the Southern California Chapter, effective January 20, 1950. You will be a member of that Chapter, or of some other chapter if you later transfer thereto, until your membership in The Institute terminates.

Your certificate of membership, duly executed by the Officers of The Institute, will be sent in due course.

The Board of Directors welcomes you to membership in The Institute and The Secretary's office is at your service to the extent of its powers.

The policies and the activities of The Institute are developed largely from problems arising within the chapters. By taking an active part in your Chapter affairs, you will contribute to the advancement of the objects of The Institute and will increase the benefits to be derived from Institute membership.

We bespeak your active cooperation.

Sincerely yours,

Secretary

Gus W. Kalionzes, 75; Noted L.A. Architect

Architect Gus W. Kalionzes, who designed the landmark St. Sophia Greek Orthodox Cathedral on Normandie Avenue at Pico Boulevard, has died of cancer.

Kalionzes was 75 when he died Wednesday at Daniel Freeman Hospital Medical Center in Inglewood.

He was the principal architect for the ornate, Byzantine-style St. Sophia Cathedral, which was dedicated in September, 1952. He designed the $2-million concrete-and-steel building to resist earthquakes and fire, and stand for 600 years without major renovation. Its roof areas and graceful domes are sheathed in 25,000 pounds of copper, expected to last for centuries.

The cathedral was his pride and joy, and the most prominent of the projects he worked on in a career that spanned nearly 45 years.

His firm was known for its design of hospitals, including South Coast Medical Center in South Laguna, South Bay Hospital in Redondo Beach and Pioneers Memorial Hospital in Brawley. He also designed additions to Santa Monica Hospital Medical Center, California Hospital Medical Center and Kern County General Hospital in Bakersfield.

He drew the plans for the Teamsters Building on 9th and Union streets downtown, a structure with a stately lobby decorated in black marble.

A native of Los Angeles, he graduated from the USC School of Architecture in 1936 and joined the prestigious local firm of Walker & Eisen. In 1947 he designed and built his own office on San Vicente Boulevard and practiced there with a succession of partners until he retired in 1980.

Funeral services will be held today at 11 a.m. at St. Sophia Cathedral.

weather reports and communications for aircraft.

While with the Navy after World War I, he contributed to the development of catapults and arresting gear for the launch and recovery of planes from aircraft carriers.

Born in Creston, Iowa, on Aug. 26, 1886, Hunsaker graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1908, the same year Orville Wright gave the Army its first successful demonstration of an airplane.

He was sent to MIT for postgraduate study and was named an instructor there in 1912 while still attached to the Navy's construction corps. In 1914 he built the first effective wind tunnel in the United States, capable

Costa Mesa, 106, Offered Few Clues to His Longevity

Richard E. Fort, 106, who didn't drink and gave up smoking long ago, but otherwise could offer no secrets to his longevity, died Tuesday at Flagship Convalescent Center in Newport Beach.

He is survived by his wife of 72 years, Marie, now 97, a daughter, two grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Fort moved to Costa Mesa 20 years ago when he retired as chief electrical engineer of the Winona Unified School District in Minnesota.

His father was a Union soldier in the Civil War, but Fort himself was never called to military service. He was just about to sign up for duty when the peace treaty was signed ending World War I. By the time the United States entered World War II, he was 62.
