Dear Mr. Belli:

In response to your letter of March 16th please be advised that all members who are owners or managers in an organization using registered architects to perform services for the public is liable for the payment of supplemental dues. It is the responsibility of the member to advise the Institute each year of his/her status regarding supplemental dues when paying the Regular dues.

Since a members status in a firm can change from year to year, we cannot clear a member as not liable each year if he was not liable the year before.

Based on this information, please complete the invoice attached and return it, with payment if applicable, to this office prior to April 17, 1981. Upon receipt of your response/payment, your 1981 National AIA dues obligation will be complete.

If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact this office.

Dear Ms. Kolasinski:

This is to acknowledge receipt of your letter of December 4, 1981 concerning my status in the AIA.

Again, for the record and having kept the Chicago Office, as well as the National Office informed that I, personally, own no stock in the firm of Illinois Belli & Belli and as an individual can not control the policy of the Company to reimburse the AIA for whatever professionals or registered architects they may have in their employ. And also, to insure you that as an individual and in accordance with our records, all of my payments to both the Chicago and the National Office are in order and I believe that I comply with their by-laws as far as an individual is concerned. If not, please advise.

Let me also assure you that I consider this matter rather serious and I trust that a reply will be forthcoming.

Dear Mr. Belli:

The Chicago Chapter phoned regarding your letter to the Chapter dated December 7 and asked us to respond.

You are aware that all members (and reapplicants) who are owners and managers in organizations using registered architects to perform professional services are liable for supplemental dues, in addition to regular dues.

The matter of company payment or reimbursement on any AIA dues is one between member and firm. It can be a factor in deciding whether or not to join the AIA, but it is not a factor in determining how much dues one has to pay to maintain membership.

The name "Belli & Belli Co." appears on your letterhead which would imply that you have ownership or managerial position in the firm. "Belli & Belli of Missouri, Inc." is listed in the 1980 edition of Profile of American Architectural Firms with your name as the AIA member in charge. On the surface at least, it seems that you would be responsible for supplemental dues in order to be an AIA member.

We note that you have the proper form for reapplying and we hope that you are able to do so soon.

Sincerely yours,

Maureen Marx, Hon. AIA

Attn: Maureen Marx

Dear Ms. Marx:

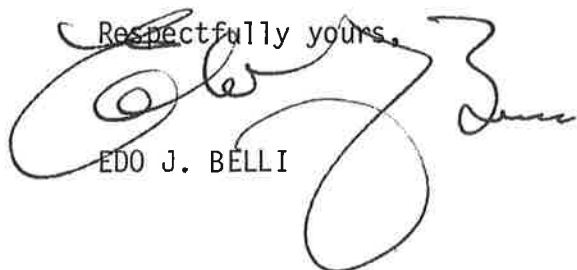

Receipt of your letter dated January 22, 1982 is acknowledged. Since this question of my membership is being delegated from one party to another, I felt I would make one last attempt to explain my position with either Illinois Belli & Belli, Belli & Belli Company or Belli & Belli of Missouri.

For your information, I am not a stockholder in any one of these companies. I am, in deed, in a managerial position; however, I can not dictate policy or force the stockholders to meet your demands concerning the supplemental dues. The companies have a policy to reimburse its employees for individual dues, magazine subscriptions, out-of-pocket expenses but they will not take on the expense that the AIA feels is due them.

Should it simplify matters, and this very well may have been an error on my part, I will be more than happy to issue my own personal draft in order to keep my membership in force.

Please advise.

Respectfully yours,

In response to your letter dated January 29, as a manager of Belli & Belli Co., according to the Bylaws, you would be liable for supplemental dues on yourself and any licensed architects who work under your supervision.

If there are any further questions or if you have any suggestions for changes, you might direct them directly to Henry Schirmer, FAIA, the Treasurer of the AIA.

We look forward to the early receipt of your reapplication, via the Chicago Chapter, and to your reinstatement to AIA membership.
