2. Describe nominee's notable work in design, to bring out the particular achievements the nominators believe have notably contributed to the advancement of the profession.

Bakersfield City Hall - One of the earliest public buildings employing the lift-slab method of construction. Many of the present-day details and methods of lift-slab were developed and pioneered on this job with highly satisfactory results.

Lincoln Savings Building - On this relatively small, but extremely high priced site in downtown Los Angeles, the architects were able to convince the owners of the value of a noticeable setback from the property line in order to better enhance the main facade with attractive landscaping.

Bakersfield Savings Building - This high rise savings & loan and office building was planned in two phases. However, from economic analysis and special research work by the architects, the owners elected to build the entire concept following verification of the architect's original analysis and research report...an example of how an architect can offer an additional and vital service to his client by preparing a comprehensive and realistic economic analysis of income property as well as the additional prestige value of good architecture in a highly competitive field of banking and finance.

Administration Building, Kern County Union High School and College District - By employing new methods of space assignment and "common" areas for secretarial employees, the architects were able to save considerable area in planning this facility and thus build an extremely functional administration building within the limits of a very "tight" budget.

Vignolo Residence - Selected by ARCHITECTURAL DIGEST as an outstanding example of architect-decorator-landscape architect team work for a large prestige residence in Central California.

Foothill High School - This new high school planned for 1500 students was particularly noteworthy because the School District was able to completely air condition all facilities as a result of planning and construction methods recommended and devised by the architects which resulted in sufficient savings in cost to more than offset the additional cost of year round air conditioning.
