Philadelphia, March 27, 1913.

Mr. Walter Cook,
President, American Institute of Architects,
3 West 29th Street, New York City.

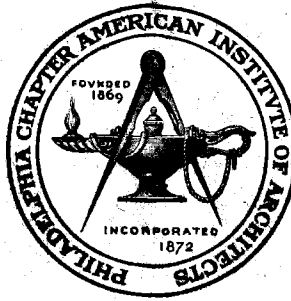

Dear Mr. Cook:-

I enclose herewith, for your information, copy of a letter dated March 26th I am addressing to the Board of Directors of the Institute and sending to the Secretary, relative to the nomination of three members of the Philadelphia Chapter for Fellowship in the Institute. We would appreciate it very much if you would give this matter your very careful consideration when the subject of nominating Fellows is taken up by the Board.

Very sincerely yours,

John Hall Rankin
President.

JOHN HALL RANKIN, PRESIDENT
1012 WALNUT STREET
HORACE WELLS SELLERS, SECRETARY
STEPHEN GIRARD BUILDING

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

Philadelphia, March 26, 1913.

The Board of Directors,
American Institute of Architects.

Sirs:-

I beg to present, for your consideration, three names for advancement to the grade of Fellowship in the Institute. In so doing, I venture to remind the Board that recognition in this form has been extended more sparingly to the Philadelphia Chapter than to many of the other Chapters. Although the Chapter contains nearly eighty Institute members, we count only seventeen Fellows, eight of whom date this grade prior to the time the present method of advancement was adopted. It is unnecessary for me to say that this fact is no argument for conferring the honor upon any member not fully qualified to receive it, but among the three whose names are brought forward at this time is none concerning whose qualifications there can be the slightest doubt.

PAUL PHILIPPE GRET.

Professor Gret is without doubt one of the distinguished members of the Institute. His architectural education began in the Ecole des Beaux Arts, Lyons, France, where he spent five years, winning the Paris Prize (E.D.B.A., Lyons, 1897). He remained at the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris until he received his diploma in 1903, being awarded that year the Gold Medal, Salon des Artistes Francais. The same year he became Professor of Design, University of Pennsylvania, a position he still holds. He is engaged also in the general practice of architecture, and has done some important work.

It seems almost superfluous to comment upon the position Mr. Gret has acquired in the profession in America, but it would be scarcely just not to call attention to the fact that there is probably no architect in the country whose opinion is more sought or whose judgment more valued. In a recent notable competition involving a larger expenditure than any other of recent years, he declined no less than six requests by competitors for criticism of their designs at large fees. He is in great demand as juror in important competitions and he performs this duty not only with great ability, but with painstaking care and conscientiousness. His services have been eagerly sought by the City of Philadelphia, where he is a member of the Comprehensive Plans Commission and the Municipal Art Jury. There is universal sentiment here that this year should not be allowed to pass without electing Mr. Cret to Fellowship in the Institute.

CHARLES ZELLER KLAUDER.

Mr. Klauder, of Day & Klauder, has been connected with Frank Miles Day for about fourteen years. He is a designer of rare discrimination and ability and has done much of the designing for the Day office for several years. He is highly regarded by his colleagues in Philadelphia, not only for his ability, but for his sterling character, high professional ideals and general high-mindedness. His valuable service as President of the T Square Club, during a period of temporary ill health, was an example of self-sacrifice that will not soon be forgotten by his professional brethren here who know him and appreciate him. In electing him a Fellow, the Institute would raise the average of that class of membership.

WARREN POWERS LAIRD. Sc. D. Honorary member of the Institute.

Dr. Laird has been Professor of Architecture in charge of the Department, University of Pennsylvania, for nearly-twenty-two years. He received his architectural education at Cornell University, followed by atelier work in Paris. During his incumbency as head of the Department of Architecture, University of Pennsylvania, it has grown from one of the smallest to the largest in the country. Professor Laird, moreover, has probably had a more extensive experience as professional advisor in competitions than any other architect in the country, and he unquestionably has performed a most valuable service to the profession in developing and establishing, after years of labor, a form of program that led up to the standard now required by the Institute. He is already an Honorary Member of the Institute and as the successful head of the largest architectural Department, together with his long record of service to the profession, it would seem that the Institute owes it to itself to create him a Fellow.

These three names are not suggested in the hope that one or perhaps two may be favorably acted upon, but they have been taken from a list of ten or twelve members of the Philadelphia Chapter who are all well qualified, as being conspicuously deserving, and as representing the least the Institute should do at this time in recognizing certain of its members in this territory.

The data herein contained has been taken from the archives of the Chapter, and none of the nominees has any knowledge that his name is being presented to the Board.

Proceedings of the Fifty-fourth Annual Convention of the American Institute of Architects

Held in the Auditorium of the National Museum, Washington, D. C., May 11, 12, and 13, 1921.

---

Published by the Board of Directors
American Institute of Architects

Cordial invitations were extended to hold this Convention on the Pacific Coast. Various reasons of expediency and expense led to the decision to hold the Convention in Washington, but by a readjustment of certain activities it was found possible to send the President on a long official circuit of the country. Accompanied at times by Mr. Kohn and Mr. Russell, and joining in their several localities various other Directors. Mr. Kendall carried the greetings of the Institute to the Chapters of Minnesota, Washington State, Oregon, San Francisco, Southern California, Texas, Kentucky, and Cincinnati, and Mr. Kohn visited Louisiana.

The value of such trips is unquestioned. The burden on the time and strength of the Institute's officers is considerable but gladly borne within the bounds of practical limitations. The burden of expense has in the past frequently controlled, but with an already increased membership, sufficient funds should, in the future, be available for this purpose.

The replies to requests for Chapter action and report on matters referred to Chapters by the last Convention do not, the Board feels, show a satisfactory condition of activity throughout the Institute. Many replies are contained in the copies of Chapter Minutes and are culled out at the Octagon for the use of the various committees. It is possible some of these may have escaped notice, but subject to such error, it appears that one third of the Chapters failed to reply to any of these requests, and of the 27 Chapters that did reply, only 12 reported on more than 2 out of the 5 major subjects referred.

The Board feels that in every Chapter there must be an opinion even if no particular interest in these matters, and regrets the lack of cooperation evidenced by the replies received.

Delegates Expenses

The present standard method of equalizing delegates expenses is in effect this year. The sudden increase in membership during the year has added some 70 delegates to this Convention. Last year with 1,400 members there was a total of 208 delegates. This year with 2,100 there are about 280.

This will indicate that a considerable increase in the number of delegates is to be expected in the next few years. Additional delegates impose an added expense on the Chapter, but also make possible to a greater degree the advantages that accrue both to the individuals and to the profession from attendance at Convention. There is obviously a limit to the size of a Convention that can act efficiently as a unit. Our Conventions have clearly not reached that limit yet, but such a limit may well be considered.

The advantages of additional delegates must be weighed against the added burden of expense, and as this is a Chapter expense the opinion of the Chapters should govern the decision.

In the past only about seventy-five per cent of permitted delegates have been present.

The time required in travel accounts for some of the absences. Are the balance due to the expense involved, or to lack of interest?

The Board suggests that the Convention discuss the matter fully, in connection with a proposal to reduce representation which will come before it for action at the suggestion of the New Jersey Chapter.

Regional Representation

In electing Directors this year the Board urges careful consideration of the Regional districts suggested by the Board for tacit adoption without the passage of any By-law amendments. This method of procedure permits completing the desired distribution of Directors at the next Convention, at which time the best method of making this distribution official may be satisfactorily determined.

As there will be many candidates on the ballot and as it is desirable that not more than one be elected from any district, the Board suggests the following resolution be passed to determine election:

WHEREAS there are three Directors to be elected at this Convention, and

WHEREAS it is deemed desirable that each such Director be elected from a different section of the country and that the three be elected from three of the districts numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 7 and 9, as defined in the Circular of Information regarding the Convention, dated February 8, 1921, therefore be it

RESOLVED, that the candidate from any of such six districts receiving the highest vote be declared elected, that the candidate from any of the five remaining districts receiving the highest vote be declared elected and that the candidate from the four then remaining districts receiving the highest vote be declared elected.

Annual Exhibition

The Second Annual Exhibition of the Chapters marks the adoption of the Exhibition as a regular feature of our Convention in accordance with the direction of the Fifty-third Convention. It seems wise, however, to give the Board some discretion in the matter as circumstances may sometimes make conformity to this general rule inadvisable. Paraphernalia for mounting the exhibits is now created in Washington as a result of the first two Exhibitions. When the Convention is held elsewhere undue expense may be involved. It may be found also that the burden of an Exhibition each year is unduly great, or that more significant Exhibitions would be possible if held every two or three years. The Board suggests, therefore, the following resolution:

RESOLVED, that the holding of an Exhibition at the time of the Convention shall in future be at the discretion of the Board of Directors.

The method of assessment of Chapters for their portion of the expense, has been continued this year as last. The Board believes it wise for this Convention to take definite action approving or modifying the present method for the guidance of future Exhibition Committees. The Board would favor, as increased finances may permit, the assumption by the Institute of an increasing share of the expense.

This exhibition is marked by the award of six gold medals for distinguished work in six different fields of effort. The divisions are according to the general type of structure, defined as Ecclesiastical, Domestic, Institutional, Commercial, Public, and Industrial. These medals it is hoped may be made an annual event. They are made possible this year through the gift of the Treasurer, Mr. Waid, whose generous interest is gratefully acknowledged by the Board of Directors.

THE PRESIDENT. Thank you. In declaring this Convention adjourned, I would like to say just one word. I will confess to you that it was with some very shaky knees, and with a good deal of trepidation that I came first to this platform.

I want to say with regard to one particular feature, that we have heard here this morning and during the Convention, various comments upon Chapter activities. New Jersey has presented a series of resolutions. Illinois has come here prepared with certain amendments. Boston has come here prepared to take up its propositions. Other Chapters have given us the benefit of their study and work. We have not approved all that has been suggested. But I wish most cordially to approve and commend the spirit and interest and loyalty which have produced these suggestions. It means that you are thinking about the Institute, and that the Institute in the Chapters is doing its work. We have not been able to see everything just as you have seen it, but we know that you are looking out for and thinking of the welfare of the Institute. Therefore our thanks are due, and we commend your activity.

Let me say that my spirits have risen day by day as we have worked through this Convention and as we have turned off item after item on our program as you have cordially and beautifully supported the Chair and your officers. I wish to thank you for your support which has been given, for this evidence of your recognition of our service, and to say that the finest thing of the Convention in one way to me is the personal friendships that I have formed for and with you. I rejoice in your acquaintance. I am more than pleased with the evidence of your appreciation. If in any wise I have merited it, it is because you have so cordially supported me during the year and through this Convention. I want to have you extend to others whom you may not know personally something of that spirit of friendship and cordiality which you have given to me and to your Directors and Officers.

Now gentlemen, I declare the Convention adjourned sine die and wish you all God speed. (Applause).

Thereupon at 4:50 o'clock the Convention adjourned sine die.

Dinner at the Chevy Chase Club.

The concluding function of the Convention was an informal dinner held at the Chevy Chase

Club, Maryland, on Friday evening, May 13. There were present approximately one hundred and fifty delegates, a number of invited guests, and the ladies.

President Kendall called upon Mr. Charles Moore, Chairman of the Commission of Fine Arts, and the honor guest of the occasion, for remarks.

Mr. Moore responded with a most interesting and graceful talk, in which he told of the work of the Commission of Fine Arts, its cordial relations in the past with the Institute, and his personal desire for even closer cooperation between the Commission and the Institute toward the accomplishment of a mutual goal, the beautification of Washington and its development in accordance with the Park Commission plans.

In acknowledging Mr. Moore's address, the President assured him of the very genuine desire of the Institute to support the Commission of Fine Arts in the splendid work which it is doing.

Exhibition Awards

Mr. Abram Garfield, Chairman of the Jury of Awards for the Second National Architectural Exhibition reported as follows:

"The jury met on the first day of the Convention and continued in session from time to time through two days. Five classes of buildings were given medals, Ecclesiastical, Domestic, Institutional, Public and Industrial. The jury was of the opinion that, in general, the Exhibition was of a higher standard than the work shown at the Fifty-third Convention but that, in its opinion, some classes of work did not represent the best that the authors have produced.

"The medal for Ecclesiastical work was given to the Reredos of St. Thomas' Church in New York City designed by Bertram Goodhue, in collaboration with Lee Lawrie, sculptor. It is a commentary upon the excellence, of what might be called a detail, that should take place before designs of completed buildings.

"The medal for Domestic Work was awarded to the residence of J. P. Jefferson, Santa Barbara, California, designed by Reginald Johnson of Pasadena. This class of work was perhaps better represented than any other and several designs of a very high order were considered before a conclusion could be reached.

"Institutional work was also well represented but the jury found themselves bound to agree with a judgment already made and awarded a medal to the new university buildings at Princeton, designed by Charles Z. Klauder of Philadelphia.

"The exhibition of Public Buildings was not an extensive one inasmuch as the Jury did not consider bank buildings to be in this class. The design by Howard Dwight Smith, of the Department of Architecture of Ohio State University, for the Stadium of that University was selected as worthy of a medal. The plan has some awkward features owing to considerations which the designer believed to be of practical importance, and the Jury agreed with his point of view. The building is of concrete and the material is frankly indicated.

"Industrial Buildings were not represented as extensively in numbers as they might have been. The ones exhibited were of a high order but it is hoped that another year will bring out a much larger number of designs belonging to this class. The medal was awarded to the building designed by George C. Nimmons and Company of Chicago, for the Sears-Roebuck Corporation."

I regretted very much my inability to attend our League meeting which was held to do honor to the memory of Bertram Goodhue last week. I regretted it still more since I hear that you were one of those present to pay tribute to a great man we have lost.

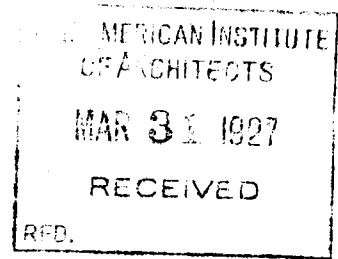

I have just been invited as the President of the Institute to suggest the names of two or three men available for consultation in regard to campus plan for Earlham College. I mention this so that you will understand if you receive an inquiry from Mr. H.N. Wright of Richmond, Indiana.

I have not seen you since you telegraphed me about the negotiations which you were conducting in connection with your great University at Pittsburgh. I hope it was settled to your entire satisfaction and want to congratulate you on this fine opportunity.

My dear Mr. Kemper:-

Having occasion to inform myself of an architect or engineer in your City by the name of P. M. Anderson, I should deem it a personal favor if you would write me confidentially, if you will, telling me of the standing of this person. I am told he has designed the American University (a Methodist institution, I believe), also the Veterans' Hospital, but whether as architect or engineer I do not know.

Is he a civil, a mechanical or a structural Engineer, and does he practice as an Architect?

His name has been given to me in connection with a proposed project of some size in which I may become interested.

I should like to know something not only of his professional footing but of his personal character and reputation.

Any information you may give me will be much appreciated.

Yours very truly,

CONFIDENTIAL.

November 26, 1927

Dear Mr. Klauder:-

Your letter of November 22, inquiring as to the status of Mr. P. M. Anderson, was received just after Mr. Kemper left the city to attend a meeting of the Finance Committee in New York.

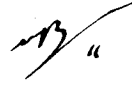

However, at a meeting of the Institute Board of Examiners, held at The Octagon yesterday afternoon, I took the liberty of showing your letter to the Chairman of the Board, Mr. E. W. Donn. He knew Mr. Anderson, said that he had recently applied for architectural registration (Mr. Donn is also Chairman of the Board of Examiners and Registrars of Architects for the District) and that after some deliberation the Board granted him his registration, but as Mr. Donn said he got it "by the skin of his teeth".

Mr. Donn considered that Mr. Anderson was neither an architect nor an engineer, but more or less of a mechanic. In other words he is not a man of very high calibre.

The other two members of the Board of Examiners also know of Mr. Anderson and they fully concurred in Mr. Donn's statements.

Mr. Donn stated he knew you very well, so I have not hesitated in giving you an almost verbatim report of his remarks.

Sincerely yours,

Assistant to Mr. Kemper.

My dear Mr. Kemper:

In the work of writing my book upon the development of college and university architecture, I have occasion to arrive at as close an estimate as possible of the number of persons in this country who are occupied with the art of architecture. I am trying to make a point of the numerical weight of opinion on architectural subjects. I earnestly hope that you can and will assist me in obtaining this data.

The number of practicing architects in this country would be the starting point I presume, and then to estimate the number of their assistants or draughtsmen. Do you know whether any reliable average has been assumed as the number of draughtsmen employed by the principals? Membership in architectural associations I fancy would be quite misleading on account of duplication and the fact that all draughtsmen do not belong to them.

Your assistance in this matter will be greatly appreciated by

Yours sincerely,

March 2, 1928

Dear Mr. Klauder:

Your letter of the 28th with regard to the number of persons engaged with the art of architecture:

This is a hard subject on which to get definite information.

The census returns for 1920 give the total number of architects in the United States at 18,185. Probably the 1930 census will show a large increase over the 1920 total. We do not consider the 1920 figures reliable. Only 28 states, the District of Columbia, Hawaii, and Porto Rico have registration or license laws. In the others anybody can call himself an architect. In the registration law states those practising before the enactment of the laws can continue to call themselves architects.

On the basis of the membership of the Institute, plus such information as we can obtain from the registration and license law states, plus the most reliable of the private lists (for the non-registration law states) I believe it is safe to say that there are 11,000 men now in the United States rendering to their clients a degree of professional, architectural service which fairly entitles them to call themselves architects. Of this number 3,200 are members of The American Institute of Architects.

"Pencil Points", the architectural magazine, is undertaking to render a service which will keep current the list of architects in the United States. We have that list which shows a total of approximately 9,000 addresses. It does not list individuals separately from their firms, and I believe this accounts for the apparent discrepancy between the "Pencil Points" total and that of 11,000 given above.

So far as I know there have been no reliable investigations as to the number of draughtsmen employed by principals. Probably the agency best qualified to make an estimate is "Pencil Points" - on account of the character of their work and publication. I do not believe that figures on the memberships of the architectural and draughtsmen's associations would be helpful or in any degree representative.

If I had to guess I would say there were a few more than twice as many qualified architectural draughtsmen as there are architects, or say 25,000 in all. But this is only a guess.

The commercial lists of architects which are not very reliable contain totals of from 12,000 to 16,000 names of architects. I do not believe they attempt to render a service with reference to lists of architectural draughtsmen.

If there is some lead that we might investigate here, or some way in which we might be of more definite help, please command.

Dear Mr. Kemper:

Let me thank you for your very carefully considered reply of the 2d inst. to my inquiry concerning the number of persons engaged in architecture in this country.

I have pondered over this data and although the sources of information are, as you say, uncertain and the result somewhat vague, I am quite sure you are in a position to make the most reliable estimate of practitioners and their assistants. I doubt not that in other businesses and professions there is wanting an accurate means of tabulation as is the case with architects.

Grateful for your cooperation, I am

for the file: -

At one o'clock, Saturday, February 14th, Mr. Charles Z. Klauder telephoned from Philadelphia, asking advice as to the procedure which should be followed in order that his firm might be considered by the Treasury Department for the designing of the Custom House in Philadelphia.

It was suggested that he communicate direct with the Treasury Department, giving his qualifications fully, submitting photographs of executed work and referring to clients and others who could testify as to his ability and standing; further that it might be well for him to call in person on Mr. Heath, or the Acting Supervising Architect.

He requested that this office assist him in obtaining an appointment, and such was done, as indicated by copy of the telegram attached.

Mr. E. C. Kemper, Exec. Secy.,
American Institute of Architects,
The Octagon,
Washington, D. C.

My dear Mr. Kemper:

Remembering the valuable assistance your office has given me in times past I beg leave to ask your further aid.

While this particular case concerns myself, I think other similar cases are likely to arise, as the employment of private architects by the Government often involves the association of architects. The information you possess might, therefore, have quite a wide application.

An architect practising in a small town was commissioned by the Treasury Department to be the architect of a post office building there, providing he would employ me as consultant. Pursuant to the expressed desire of the Treasury, I drew up an agreement covering our association and the scope of my service as outlined by the Department. This was executed by the other architect and myself and sent to Washington for approval. Shortly thereafter the Treasury Department released a news item stating that we had been appointed architects of the post office building. I mention all this in order to show to what extent the Government not only had cognizance of our relationship, but had initiated it.

Having been chiefly responsible for the design of the building, I have fully performed; and upon Mr. Wetmore's inquiring last February I wrote him my approval of the drawings. Erection of the building was begun last June.

The local architect has received one or more substantial payments on account of his fee; but I have received from him only a small part of mine. No complaint of service is made by him, nor can he be charged with deceit or misrepresentation. He merely makes a frank acknowledgment of a heavy burden of long-standing debts, tells a hard-luck story, etc.; offers his note, which I have declined, etc., - all a chain of circumstance which must be quite familiar to you.

Now I come to the question I should like to have answered by yourself as one in an excellent position to know. Is it the policy of the Treasury Department to interest itself in, to pursue or to assume any responsibility for the destination and the proper division of payments it makes to associated architects, particularly in cases where it has initiated such association?

October 6, 1932

Mr. E. C. Kemper-

If the answer to this question is in the affirmative, then an architect associated as consultant or otherwise and suffering from underpayment or nonfulfillment of agreement would not only be justified in appealing to the Department but would be expected to do so; and presumably would be protected by a different procedure in subsequent payments made by the Department.

If the answer is negative, it would mean that any architect making such an appeal would be considered a nuisance; and by so doing he would prejudice his standing before the Department. His only recourse then would be to recover if possible by exerting pressure with legal advice direct upon his associate.

Since the Government habits and methods are deeply ingrained and not easily to be departed from for individual cases, you can understand that I do not wish to approach the Department unless there is every justification for it, even though one of its officers advised me to write there.

It is unnecessary to add that I shall deeply appreciate your confidential response.

With cordial regards, I am

Sincerely yours

Charles H. Klauder

Let me thank you for your letter of the 18th, telling of the investigation you have kindly made of the late John Stewardson's connection with the Institute.

I hope this search did not require too much of your time, for I realize that you are handicapped by reduced clerical force and in the face of heavy extra work due to the various Government activities affecting our interests.

My dear Mr. Klauder:

It appears from the record at The Octagon that you sent a check for $15.00 covering Institute dues for the current year.

As you know, under the plan for adjusting dues, you could have taken a credit of $5.00.

A number of members followed the same procedure and a list thereof was submitted to President Russell at the time of his recent visit to The Octagon.

It is his understanding that you intended to make a gift of the credit, of the nature outlined in his letter of July 1st, copy of which is enclosed.

The return card which accompanied that letter is also enclosed, for your signature and return if you can assist the Institute to the extent indicated.

Dear Mr. Leisenring:

Responding to your informal inquiry concerning the standing of Charles Z. Klauder, Architect, of Philadelphia

Mr. Klauder is especially and favorably well known for his institutional work, particularly in the field of buildings used for educational purposes.

He became a member of The American Institute of Architects in 1901, and the honor of Fellowship was conferred upon him in 1913.

Fellowship in the Institute is conferred upon a member who, in the opinion of an authorized Jury of Fellows, has notably contributed to the advancement of the profession in design, construction, literature, education, or public service.

With reference to some of the buildings designed by Mr. Klauder, we refer you to "Who's Who in America".

If more detailed information is desired, and you will so advise, we will be glad to secure it.

Sincerely yours,

Executive Secretary.

CHARLES KLAUDER, NOTED ARCHITECT

Designer of Many Churches and College Buildings Is Dead in Philadelphia

WAS SON OF IMMIGRANTS

Received Numerous Honors
for His Work—Began Career
at the Age of 15

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30.—Charles Zeller Klauder, noted architect, died today in his apartments in the Rittenhouse Plaza at the age of 66.

Active until a short time before his death, Mr. Klauder was responsible for the design of many churches, libraries and universities throughout the country, among them buildings at Princeton, Yale and the University of Pennsylvania.
He was supervising architect for New York University. For the University of Pennsylvania he designed Franklin Field, Hutchinson Gymnasium, the Palestra indoor stadium,
the museum and Wightman Hall.

He was born in Philadelphia,
Feb. 9, 1872, the son of Louis and Anna Caroline Koehler Klauder, German immigrants who came to this country in their youth.

After a brief term in the School of Industrial Art at the Pennsylvania Museum, he entered the office of T. P. Chandler, a leading Philadelphia architect, in 1887, remaining there until 1893, except for a three-week engagement with Shickel & Co. in New York. He became associated with several architectural firms in succession,
Wilson Brothers & Co., Walter
Cope, Day & Brother and Horace Trumbauer.

Became Partner in 1911

In 1900 he re-entered the firm of Day & Brother and eleven years later was admitted to partnership, the firm name being changed to Day Brothers & Klauder. When H.
Kent Day retired at the end of 1912,
the firm name became Day &
Klauder. Frank Miles Day died in 1918 and on Jan. 1, 1927, the firm name again was changed, this time to Charles Z. Klauder.

Mr. Klauder was executive architect for the Holder Hall group and many other buildings at Princeton University; the "Cathedral of Learning," Heinz Memorial Chapel and Stephen Foster Memorial Building at the University of Pittsburgh, and for structures at Brown University, Cornell University, University of Colorado, Denver University, Pennsylvania State College, Wellesley College, Albion College, Drew University, Concordia Seminary,
Mercersburg Academy, The Hill
School, St. Paul's School, University of Chicago, University of Delaware, Hartford Theological Seminary, Theil College, Vanderbilt University, Rhode Island School of Design and the Staunton Military Academy.

Received Many Honors

In 1891 Mr. Klauder received the silver medal of the Philadelphia T-Square Club, in 1918 the medal of the Philadelphia chapter of the American Institute of Architects, in 1921 the gold medal of the Architectural League of New York, the gold medal of the American Institute of Architects for the best institutional work, and the honorary degree of Master of Fine Arts from Princeton University.

He was elected corresponding member of the Central Association of Austrian Architects of Vienna in 1926, and in 1927 received the grand prix and the silver medal of the Pan-American Congress of Architects at Buenos Aires. He received the medal of the architectural exhibition coincident with the Olympic games at Amsterdam in 1928.

Surviving are his widow, the former Frederika M. Bower, whom he married in 1901, and two children, Elfrieda Marie Klauder Parker of Southampton, Pa., and Charles Z.
Klauder Jr., an architect, who resides at Ambler, Pa.

C. Z. Klauder, Architect, Dies; Collegiate Building Authority

Special to the Herald Tribune

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30.—Charles Zeller Klauder, one of the nation's foremost authorities on collegiate architecture, designer and architect of the new library and dormitories of Princeton University, consulting architect of the Harkness Memorial Dormitories at Yale University and designer of the University of Pittsburgh's Cathedral of Learning, died at noon today after a heart attack at his home in the Rittenhouse Plaza Apartments here. He was sixty-six years old.

Mr. Klauder, who rose in a lifetime of work for one firm from office boy to a dominant position in his profession, was the foremost exponent of collegiate Gothic.

A son of German immigrants, he was born in Philadelphia on February 9, 1872. He entered the office of F. M. Day & Co., architects, when he was eighteen years old. He became a partner in 1911, and took over the firm in 1918.

From the beginning he specialized in Gothic. For Princeton he designed the Adrian H. Joline Memorial Dormitory and the Henry Burchard Fine Memorial Hall; for Yale, the Harkness Memorial Dormitories, and for the University of Pennsylvania, Franklin Field, Hutchinson Gymnasium, the Palestra indoor stadium, the museum and Wightman Hall.

His most ambitious project was the Cathedral of Learning, a forty-story Gothic structure for the University of Pittsburgh which marked a striking departure from traditional collegiate architecture. For his design he received the highest award of the Pan-American Congress of Architects in 1927.

He also designed for the University of Pittsburgh the Heinz Memorial Chapel and the Stephen Foster Memorial Building. His most recent design was for the $500,000 Rose Memorial Library at Drew University, Madison, N. J.

Mr. Klauder was supervising architect for the University of Delaware, Pennsylvania State College, Franklin and Marshall College, St. Paul's School, Southwestern University, Lafayette College and Hill School.

He also designed buildings at Brown University, Cornell University, the University of Colorado, Denver University, Wellesley College, Concordia Seminary, Mercersburg Academy, Staunton Military Academy and Albion College.

His talents were not confined to institutional design. He designed several residences in Philadelphia's "main line" suburbs and was the architect for Drexel & Co.'s offices at Walnut and Fifteenth Streets, Philadelphia. He also designed the headquarters building for the Philadelphia Boy Scouts.

In 1921 Mr. Klauder was awarded the gold medal of the Architectural League, of New York, and the gold medal of the American Institute of Architects. His other awards included the medal in architecture, given at the architectural exhibition coincident with the Olympic Games at Amsterdam in 1928.

Mr. Klauder was a former president of the Philadelphia chapter of the American Institute of Architects and a former president of the T-Square Club of Philadelphia.

Surviving are his wife, the former Fredericka M. Bower, whom he married in 1901, and two children, Elfrida Marie Klauder Parker, of Southampton, Pa., and Charles Z. Klauder, architect, of Ambler, Pa.

CHARLES ZELLER
KLAUDER,
F.A.I.A.,
1872-1938

In him, the citizens of Philadelphia found an example of honorable and loyal civic conduct, - a lover of his home - a devoted father, and a willing volunteer for public service whenever called upon.

In him, our profession had the privilege to know a great architect, vowed to the creation of the beautiful as an expression of his time and to the faithful service of his clients, and devoted unselfishly to the service of his fellow practitioners.

In him, his friends knew simplicity, truth and candor; they recognized his sincere friendship and his joy in association with them, his unbiased and kindly criticism, and his selfless readiness to always help them, whenever requested.

His fellow members of the Philadelphia Chapter mourn the loss of their life-long friend.
