Entered practice of Architecture as an individual under the firm name of Edwin H. Lundie, Architect, in 1920. For a period of approximately three years the practice of the office was in the field of Religious and Institutional Architecture, and occasionally in Domestic Architecture. Following that period the practice, with only occasional exception, has been Domestic Architecture, varying in scale from cottages to country estates and town houses. Practice has included Interior Architecture, Furniture Design and Decoration, and on occasion, Garden Design.

Mr. Lundie does not maintain a large office. Every drawing issued from his office receives his personal attention, and many of them are drawn by him. He will not undertake a project until he is able to give it his personal care and attention from the first conference to the completion of construction. During the past fifteen years he has had many clients who have waited two or three years to have him design houses for them.

Mr. Lundie is not a slave to any tradition; he is neither a dusty copier of old things nor a follower of glib modernists. He is a creator of order, utility and beauty, using his fertile native abilities enriched by many years of careful and painstaking work and study. He is never satisfied with anything less than perfection. He has learned much about many crafts, especially wood working, metal working and masonry, and is an accomplished designer in these fields.

While his work is widely varied, it all bears the imprint of his personality and creative imagination. Often those who know his work will recognize an unfamiliar piece of work as being his. Mr. Lundie's own summer home is on the North Shore of Lake Superior. Although it is off the highway and is reached by a narrow side road, it has become known as a place of rare charm, and receives many visitors. Mr. Lundie has been heard to remark that he can count those who have been there in his absence, and even identify some of them by examining the nose prints left on the windows by those seeking a glimpse of the attractive interior.

Since his appointment, Mr. Lundie has represented the architectural interests exceptionally well. Members of the Board hold him in high esteem and respect his judgment in matters of planning. He has served on many committees as councilor and advisor and recently was instrumental in crystalizing the plan for the Minnesota State Capitol Approach, a four million dollar project.

Dear Mr. Kemper:

We were delighted to learn that Mr. Lundie has been elected a Fellow. He tells me that he plans to be at the convention even if he has to walk all the way from Saint Paul to Salt Lake City.

We wonder what has become of the photographs that were submitted with the application. If these are not retained permanently by the Jury of Fellows, we would like to be able to exhibit them at a chapter meeting and possibly use some of them for newspaper publicity which may be given out after the convention.

The questions to be answered are the Chapter offices I have held and the dates. I wonder if the records of the A. I. A. at the Octagon will have this information, and if so, perhaps someone could forward it to me. I will appreciate it very much.

We are looking forward to seeing you out here in June for the Convention.

Architect, 70, Honored by State Group

DULUTH, Minn. (P)—A St. Paul architect who started in the profession as an unpaid office boy was honored Friday night as the Minnesota Society of Architects ended its annual meeting here.

Edwin H. Lundie, 70, was the subject of a "This is Your Life" presentation for a career that had found him designing structures stretching from the North Shore of Lake Superior to Palm Beach, Fla.

Lundie got the office boy's job with Cass Gilbert, designer of the Minnesota State Capitol, and later worked under the late Emanuel Masqueray after studying in Paris. He started out on his own in 1914, designing churches, hospitals and schools.

Then, in a small way, he started designing homes. And they were so well liked that he finally made them his life's work. His efforts were so well regarded that he was made a fellow of the American Institute of Architects in 1948, a group he first joined 26 years earlier. Lundie now is a parttime instructor at University of Minnesota.

Named president of the Minneapolis. Other officers are Claire G. Armstrong, Minneapolis, vice president; Fred Traynor, St. Cloud, secretary, and E. W. Krafft, Minneapolis, treasurer.
