6. The existence of this office in one community for more than 40 years and the large number of repeat commissions received from public institutions, estates, and important public service corporations are evidence of the high professional standards it has maintained.

In 1929 Mr. Seth J. Temple of this firm served in Lincoln, Nebraska together with Mr. William E. Fisher of Denver, Colorado, a distinguished Architect, to examine the Nebraska State Capital then under construction and report on structural weaknesses which had been given newspaper publicity. Mr. Temple later testified before an investigating committee of the State Legislature as to the exact condition of the parts in question and the steps necessary for their correction.
