June 26, 1915.

To R. Clipston Sturgis, Esq.,
President American Institute of Architects.

We, the members of the House Committee, from which our fellow worker, friend and estimable companion, Douglas H. Thomas, Jr., has been removed by the hand of death, desire here briefly to record our keen appreciation of the loss which not only we, but the Institute and the profession of Architecture have sustained.

To us, who have known him so well and whose great pleasure it has been to be associated with him in the work of our committee, his death brings with it a distinct sense of personal bereavement. We shall miss his cheery presence and his help and that inspiring personal charm which was his to a most unusual degree.

And we shall suffer more than words can say through the loss of his highly intelligent appreciation of the Octagon and his keen enthusiasm for the preservation of this fine old building.

In our further work for the year we ask for no one to take his place, for with each of us his memory shall be an incentive to so perform our share of the task increased by his absence as he, were he here, would approve.

The remaining members of

THE HOUSE COMMITTEE

To the Members of the House Committee:-

I have your letter of appreciation of Mr. Thomas with which I am in very hearty accord. His work was of great value and he will be sorely missed. I will follow your wish and name no one to fill the vacancy of your committee.

I am,

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) R. Clipston Sturgis.
