Dear Mr. Ingham:

I am very much gratified, on my return from a two weeks' vacation in Cuba this morning, to find your letter notifying me that I have been elected a Fellow of the American Institute of Architects.

Under these circumstances, I shall certainly make a very special effort to be in New Orleans for the Convention, especially for the evening session and dinner on April 22nd. However, I am very much afraid that this might prove to be impossible, as I have just taken two weeks off, and made quite a jaunt into the South land. If I do not find it possible to make the trip, I can assure you that it will be because of my having just taken the time and money for a Spring vacation, not having any idea that this was coming---and certainly will not be because of any lack of appreciation of the great, if undeserved, honor which I feel has been conferred upon me.

With best personal regards and hoping to see you in Baltimore again very soon,

Very sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. Ingham:

After writing you my letter of April 8th, I was trying hard to work out a way to get to New Orleans for the convention, or at least for the announcement of Fellowships Friday night, when an unexpected development settled the matter for me.

The University of Virginia has just requested us to make some studies and estimates, in the hope that certain trustees of a Detroit estate will decide to give them a fine library collection. These trustees are going to be in Washington on Saturday, April 23rd. As I must meet them, and must do a lot of work before doing so, it is obvious that I can't steal away to attend the Convention or even a part of it.

It is with great regret that I have to tell you this, for I wanted very much to be there to receive in person my certificate of election as a Fellow.

In deep appreciation of this election, and with best regards to you and all my friends at the Convention, I am,

Very sincerely yours,
